

ARRANGEMENT OF LIST AND CODING SYSTEM

The list has been arranged in alphabetical order with the Division for each cultivar shown in the margin. For Divisions 1, 2, and 3 the colour code used by the Daffodil Data Bank of the American Daffodil Society is added so as to describe the colour of the crown.

For the Data Bank the crown is regarded as having three zones, the inner or eye zone, the middle zone, and the outer zone or rim, and six colours only are recognized by the coding system: White (w), yellow (y), orange (o), green (g), pink (p) and red (r). A flower with a green eye, a yellow crown rimmed with non-predominant red, if it has a white perianth, in Div. 2B, thus is recorded as Div. 2b gyr.

The number following the name of each cultivar indicates the time of flowering here, so the figure 1 shows the earliest, and the figure 6 the latest period of flowering.

The name of the raiser is shown in brackets.

CULTURAL DIRECTIONS FOR DAFFODILS

To obtain best results, a sunny well drained plot of ground should be selected. Previous deep digging to aerate the soil is an advantage, but on no account should farm or stable manure be incorporated or used as a mulch. The use of inorganic fertilisers is not recommended, but a light dusting of bone meal before planting and during each successive winter will help bulb and flower production. The rate of application need not exceed 2 ozs. per square yard. Wood ashes or a sprinkling of sulphate of potash will help to produce intensity of colour.

The site should be made up some weeks before planting, which should be carried out in September. The bulbs should be covered with about twice their own depth of soil in average land, and rather less if the ground is heavy.

We recommend planting in beds about four feet wide with paths of 18 to 24 inches between beds. The bulbs are planted about eight bulbs to the row if of full size, and the rows should be sufficiently far apart to enable the space between rows to be hoed during the growing season.

Smaller quantities of bulbs can be planted in blocks or groups in herbaceous borders, but cannot be expected to produce their best blooms if planted close to hedges, or shrubs whose roots rob the soil of its productive qualities. Nor can bulbs planted in dry, parched conditions be expected to increase well, or produce large flowers after the first year.

The daffodil requires a damp retentive soil during the period when it is making the bulb which will flower in the following season. Bulbs may be left down for several seasons without being lifted, and we have good clumps which have been down for six years or more, but we now lift all commercial stocks annually and select the largest bulbs for sale.

The large round bulb with a single nose, or a large offset will produce a finer flower than a mother bulb with several noses. After flowering seed pods may develop, and the flower heads must be removed or the development of the bulbs will be prejudiced.

Not all daffodils will produce their best flowers if grown in pots, but most white trumpets, or white and red flowers do well. On the other hand yellow and reds do not come well in pots with certain exceptions, among which RIALTO is notable and can be really fine, grown in this manner. The secret of successful pot cultivation is ample watering, good ventilation and a moist atmosphere being maintained by overhead spraying, or floor watering as the buds come into flower.

We do not recommend forcing daffodils in pots, and the best practice is to plunge the pots in cool ground (under 48°F), for eight weeks at least, and to bring the pots into the greenhouse or house using no heat except to keep away frost. Bring the pots into room temperature only when flower buds are showing. Copious watering is essential once the buds are coming clear of the bulbs, and on no account should the pots be allowed to get dry.

The best way to select varieties is to see them growing and flowering. We will be glad to permit visitors to see the bulbs in flower during this Spring on Wednesday or Saturday afternoons or on other days by arrangement.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

We have oversold our stocks in the last two years and early ordering is recommended where the list shows that stocks are small.

During this period we have increased the range of seedlings which we consider have merit for exhibition or garden decoration. Breeding policy for many years has been to select for substance, colour and freedom of flowering in conjunction with the production of good hard bulbs and a good rate of bulb increase. To test the performance of new hybrids under different growing conditions we have sent out in recent years many cultivars under seedling numbers for trial, and the reports on the performance of these bulbs have led to many being named for exhibition or garden display.

We propose to follow this policy in 1977, and are making three special offers at very reduced prices of recently named seedlings, and seedlings under number which have been favourably reported on and which are likely to be named when stocks are large enough. These special parcels do not include seedlings which have been rejected as resembling a parent flower, or an existing named variety, or which fall below our standard of quality.

As some customers exhibit in Society Shows which do not have classes for seedlings under number and which are unnamed, we will upon request, only include in these special parcels, recently named seedlings, or established varieties.

SPECIAL OFFER No. 1 — Six different recently named or established named varieties for exhibition in at least 3 Divisions.

$30 post free by air mail to U.S.A. or Canada.

£10 post free to U.K. or Eire.

No. 2 — About 20 (or 3¼ lbs. net weight) bulbs for exhibition in at least 10 classes, including some selected unnamed numbered seedlings.

$50 post free by air mail to U.S.A. or Canada.

£15 post free to U.K. or Eire.

No. 3 — About 20 (or 3¼ lbs. net weight) bulbs for exhibition including a majority of unnamed numbered seedlings, and the balance of named varieties.

$30 post free by air mail to U.S.A. or Canada.

£10 post free to U.K. or Eire.

We will also make up a parcel to include any varieties specially wanted, if available, to a specified cost: £5 upwards for a U.K. order or U.S. $30 upwards for an order from the U.S.A. or Canada, plus the actual cost of air or surface mail as required.

STERLING - U.S. DOLLAR EXCHANGE RATE

U.S. and Canadian orders: Prices have been converted at the arbitrary rate of $2.00=£1, and additional bulbs will be sent to make good any difference between this rate, and the actual rate when an order is received.

Postage charges are likely to be increased again in the near future, and we suggest that for air mail delivery U.S. $10 should be added for orders of 10-20 bulbs and U.S. $20 for 20-50 bulbs. For surface parcel mail add U.S. $6 for up to 30 bulbs, U.S. $10 for 50 bulbs. We shall also add free bulbs to make good any such payments for air or surface mail postage. Parcels by surface mail will be posted before 1st September, if bulbs are fully dried out, space between rows to be hoed during the growing season.

NO VALUE ADDED TAX is added to orders from the United Kingdom or overseas.
