Tips from Dutch Gardens . . .

Daffodils ~ An Investment in Spring Beauty

No spring-flowering bulbs from Dutch Gardens yield more continuing return on your investment than our top size, top quality daffodils. These big cream of the crop bulbs not only produce colorful flowers the very next spring after planting, but they multiply to produce more and more flowers every year.

Don't become confused by all the names. Most Americans call them daffodils (or, perhaps if they are yellow, jonquils). In Europe they are often known by their family name – narcissus. By any name, they are Holland's most versatile bulbs. You can tuck them most anywhere in your gardens, beds, lawn or landscape, as long as there is ample space for them to multiply. They can be forced for indoor blooming, and are a top choice for naturalizing.

How To Plant . . Since daffodils prefer to be left undisturbed, they should be planted at least 6" deep and 6" apart. Plant them in groups of 6 to 12 of one variety and plan to leave them in the ground where they can increase in size and numbers annually. They won't require lifting and dividing until clumps become so crowded they fail to produce large blooms. A site in full sun or partial shade is recommended, but remember that most deciduous trees won't leaf out until after daffodils have finished their annual blooming. Daffodils look best if they are not planted in straight rows. Staggered planting creates the best effect. After planting, top dress with a good bulb food, such as our Performance Plus (see order form for details) and give bulbs a good initial watering unless night frost is expected.

Caring for Daffodils . . Dutch Gardens daffodils will produce excellent results with little special care. After blooming, it is important to allow foliage to wither naturally since the leaves serve as a source of nourishment for the following year's flowering. Applying a dressing of bulb food each spring will encourage more abundant blooming.

In Milder Climates . . Daffodils are suitable for immediate planting throughout Zones 3-8. In portions of Zones 9 and 10 that lack six weeks of weather below 45° F, bulbs should be pre-cooled. You'll find information about pre-cooling on the back of the order form between pages 98 and 99, in the planting guide you'll receive with your order, or on our web site – www.dutchgardens.com.

Holland's Finest Bulbs

There is no sight more beautiful than acres and acres of bright-blooming daffodils. Each spring, Dutch Gardens experts pay a visit to Holland's finest fields to select varieties which will bloom best in American gardens. By dealing directly with the growers we are not only assured of getting their top size, top quality bulbs, but can arrange quantity discounts – savings which we pass along to you.

Unmatched Beauty

Intrigue Daffodil ~ Exquisite Charmer

Few daffodils are as beautiful as this little charmer. It adds a sunny outlook to your garden, producing three delightful flowers on each strong 10-12" stem. Golden yellow petals with a subtle white inner margin surround frilled cups of cream and white. You can look forward to enjoying these lovely blooms year after year. Mixes well with other mid-spring flowers. An outstanding variety for naturalizing. Stunning in bouquets.

Dwarf Daffodils

Early Spring Color

Dutch gardeners adore these Dwarf Daffodils. They're among the earliest spring flowers to bloom, and their shorter height makes them ideal for planting around trees, in borders or rock gardens and for potting. The four charming Dwarf Daffodils shown on these pages are available individually or together in a money-saving collection.

#25935 Surfside Daffodil . . NEW! Exquisite soft lemon-yellow blooms with petals that seem to flow back like waves. Great for rock gardens, indoor forcing and for naturalizing. Grow 10-12" tall.

#12603 Jetfire Daffodil . . Fiery-colored, long-lasting early spring flowers on sturdy 8-10" stems. Bright orange cups and brilliant yellow backward-curving petals

#25103 Segovia Daffodil . . Dainty blooms with small green-tinted cups of sunny yellow atop pure white saucers. Long-lasting flowers are beautiful in bouquets. Excellent for naturalizing. Only 5-6" tall.

#12604 Rip Van Winkle Daffodil . . Exciting floral novelty. Double Miniature Daffodil has delightful 1-2" bright yellow blooms on stems just 6-8" high. Particularly effective in borders and rock gardens.

Naturalizing ~ Holland's Spring Beauty Secret

Visitors to Holland often believe Mother Nature created the lovely spreads of spring flowers which are found along fields, near woodlands, under trees and in many unexpected places like right in the middle of lawns. But most of these displays are the result of Dutch gardeners' handiwork using a simple technique known as naturalizing. Just scatter a handful of bulbs; lift out a square of top soil for each bulb; loosen the dirt in the hole a bit; mix in some bulb food; replace the soil and sod square. And then sit back and let nature take over. Come spring beautiful blossoms spring up, creating an informal effect just as though Mother Nature planned the whole delightful scene. Naturalized bulbs multiply annually, producing increased beauty year after year. Many of your naturalized plantings will provide armloads of beautiful cut flowers for spring-time bouquets. The most important thing is to start with plump, healthy bulbs known for their naturalizing ability. You'll find many varieties of such bulbs throughout this Dutch Gardens catalog. We invite you to give this easy planting technique a try around your own home. You'll reap many years of enjoyment from a minimum of cost and effort.

The Dutch Grower Who Loves to Develop New Daffodils

Jan Pennings
Leading Dutch Daffodil Grower

When Dutch Gardens wants to discover what's new and interesting in the world of daffodils, we frequently head to Holland's north country and seek out Jan Pennings. He comes from one of Holland's leading families of bulb growers which together cultivate over 650 acres. On Jan's own farm in Breezand, he grows between 15 and 17 million bulbs annually. He searches the world over for new daffodils and plants about 100 promising varieties each year. The following year he will discard half of them because, as he puts it, "they just aren't good enough." After three years of trials, he has usually retained no more than three of the original hundred. Then it will take him another 15 years before he has enough stock of the winning varieties to offer. One of Jan's favorites is Replete, which he originally found growing in Oregon in 1984. He also is extremely proud of his new Jubilee Daffodil. We're pleased he has given Dutch Gardens the exclusive privilege of introducing it to American gardeners.

Rock Garden Daffodil Mixture

All over the world, it seems everyone has "discovered" Dwarf Daffodils, which have long been popular among Dutch gardeners. They're among the earliest spring flowers to bloom and their shorter height makes them ideal for planting in borders or rock gardens, in front of hedges and around trees, or in pots on the patio or near an entrance. This very special mixture has a balanced selection of the finest white and yellow varieties.
