

Frank Galsworthy (1883 -1959) lived for 70 years at Green Acre Farm , Chertsey, Surrey. Masses of daffodils , the artist's favourite flower, were sown at random in his woods. He was known as a flower 'portraitist' and exhibited his paintings at the Royal Horticultural Shows winning the society's gold medals. He worked in water colour as he felt this captured a delicacy and charm lost in using oils. He requested no flowers be used as his funeral as he cared for them too much to let them be cut for that purpose.

From an email from Jean Carr, UK, March 7, 2018