

View this email in your browser

Final Days to Order for October Delivery

We still have many lovable daffodils looking for a new home.

One of our most important tasks is to find new homes in the United States for the daffodils we are growing.

We have received many nice orders to date, a heartfelt thank you to those who have ordered.

But there are still some terrific bulb selections looking for a new bed to call home.

The ordering period for Qdaffs is coming to a close, July 4, for bulbs to be delivered this October.

before they have been dug and inspected ?

Exactly who, we wondered, until remembering that it was us. Every grower and shipper must make decisions on what is best for the customer, what is best for the health of the bulbs and what methods are best for execution of packing, shipping and delivery.

We have confidence in our nursery and the experienced fingers that make it work. You are assured to receive the best quality bulbs.

Soon we will turn our attention from sales to tallying, digging, drying, sorting and grading. Then the tasks of packing and shipping. Not to mention the tsunami of other, non narcissus genera of bulbs that will soon compete for our attention.

We recently created and mailed this artsy postcard as a thank you and a friendly reminder to finish up any outstanding orders for the year. Hopefully you received one.

The selection shown is just a group of blooms that caught our eye late in the season this past May. In a world of ecommerce and pay per click we still have a childlike fascination with the analog magic of the US Postal Service.

Thanks for reading. Enjoy your garden.

Copyright (C) 2021 Quality Daffodils USA LLC. All rights reserved.

Our mailing address is:

Want to change how you receive these emails?
You can update your preferences or unsubscribe