NOVELTY DAFFODILS for 1951

In order to lower prices on most of the novelty varieties and maintain quotations on standard varieties at virtually the same levels which have prevailed for the past ten years, we are again publishing only this abbreviated descriptive list. In the face of rising costs all along the line, it is imperative that we raise prices on standard varieties or discontinue many of them. The latter course has been decided on, since aside from their not being profitable to grow, we need added time and space to carry on our seedlings.

There are still a considerable number of copies of our complete 1948 catalogue on hand, and we are glad to supply these to new customers, or to those who have lost or worn out theirs. We will send it free this year, but to those remitting 25c to partially defray cost of printing, we send credit coupon for that amount good on their first order, and should we in the near future publish another complete edition, their names will be on the list of those to receive free copies. Much of the information given in the 1948 edition is still applicable, although the classification has been changed.

We take this opportunity of thanking you who have ordered from us in the past, and express our gratitude for the many kind letters received, most of which could not be answered individually due to the limited time at our disposal. It is our ambition to supply good bulbs of the finest varieties to our customers, although it is obviously impossible to grow all the good ones, and some that we offer may not perform well everywhere. We call attention in particular to the fact that the pinks are not uniformly good in color in all locations nor in all seasons. Perhaps the day will come when we have pink varieties that can be depended on to be as uniformly reliable as any other class.

Although world conditions are not pleasant to contemplate these days, there is a measure of relief to be found in gardening, either in growing of flowers or vegetables, and for mental relaxation, no other form of outdoor activity can excel that of growing things. Of all garden subjects, we think none surpass Daffodils, which would be welcome at any season of the year with their undefinable charm, but coming as they do, early in the spring after having little color in the landscape or garden for months, they are doubly treasured. The beauty of form, color, and texture of some of the new varieties must be seen to be appreciated; in fact, one cannot fully comprehend their beauty without growing them and studying their characteristics in detail. We not infrequently wish their blooming season extended over a greater period of time, but no doubt, God in His Omniscience saw that we would appreciate the beauty of flowers more by providing seasonal changes. As it is, it is not uncommon for individual flowers to last three weeks or longer, and by having a good selection of varieties, to have blooms for upwards of three months.

For years we have been doing extensive hybridizing, and we have in our gardens several seedlings that we regard as having considerable merit. Most of our best ones have not yet increased to the point where we can offer them, but we have several which we have been increasing for several years that have been popular with visitors here. These are offered primarily for garden use and cutting, although some of them may be suitable for exhibition. Fairy Dream is the smoothest and most perfectly formed of the lot but is not as striking as the others. Cibola (named for the seven cities of gold sought by Coronado) is an improved Malvern Gold as it has grown here, being a beautifully rich colored flower for an extra early. Lemon Drops is perhaps the most unique of the group, while the others are striking in the garden or when cut.

Each year we write up an account of the current blooming season with our impressions of some of the new varieties, and tell something of some of our seedlings. These notes are sent out to a number on our mailing list that we believe are interested in growing the new things. If you have not received a copy of our 1950 impressions and are interested, we will be glad to mail a copy as long as the supply lasts. This material is too lengthy to publish in the catalogue.

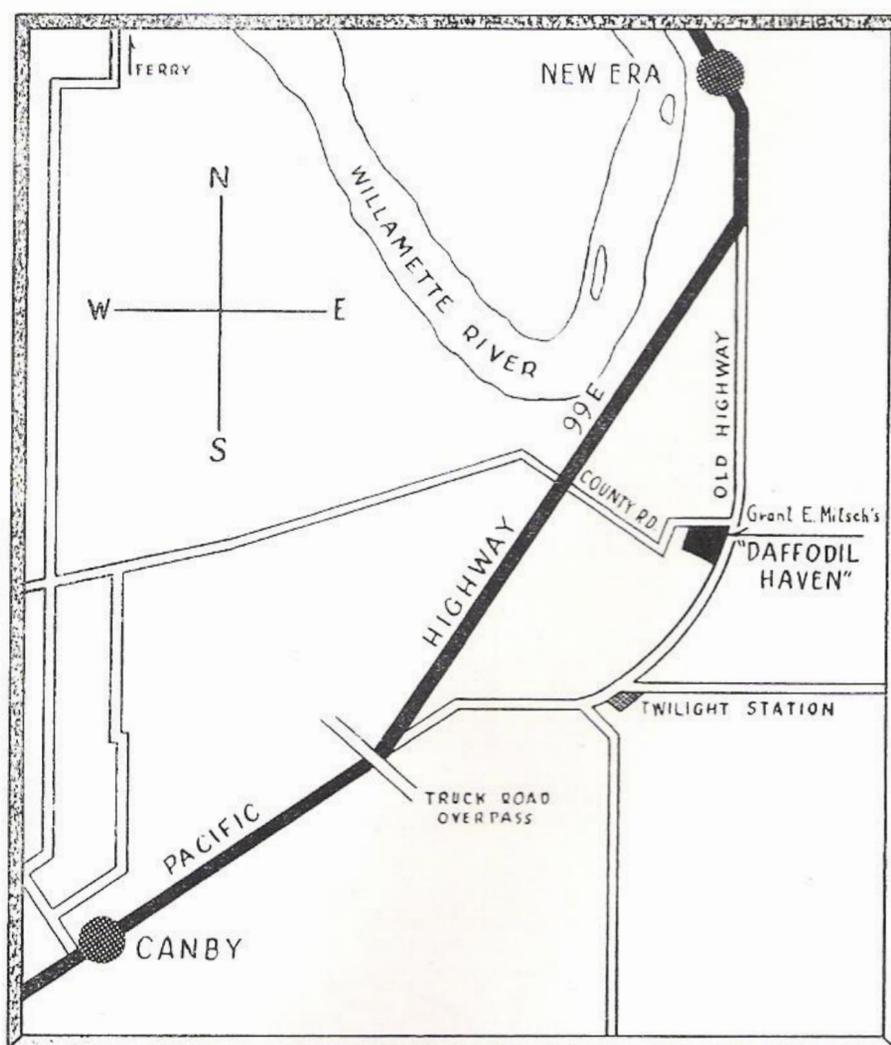

TERMS

Please send cash with order, or 25% down and the balance before delivery. Prices quoted are prepaid on orders of $2.50 or more except as noted on seedling bulbs by the hundred, our cut flower collection, and other bulbs offered in hundred quantities or larger. On smaller orders add 25c for postage and packing. However, for those willing to pay transportation, we will gladly include extra bulbs valued at more than the estimated cost of shipping. We can send by express collect, or in the case of small orders, send by parcel post and you remit for postage on receipt of order.

On cash orders of $10.00 or more sent before August 1st, except on collections, we will include 10% extra value in bulbs of our selection. Orders sent later than that date will be filled generously but we may not be able to give as much in extra value. In view of our prices remaining stationary on older varieties and declining on novelties, while prices of nearly everything else have about doubled, we advise ordering this year if interested in the cheaper kinds as we do not know how many of these we may list another season.

Prices quoted are for good double nose bulbs except for a few species that normally do not make many bulbs of this type. If sold out of double nose size, we endeavor to give equal or greater value in smaller good blooming sizes. We do not price round bulbs of novelties since we need these for our propagation. Ordinarily we start shipping around the first of September but we advise that you

Please send orders by September 1st if possible.

Visitors welcome at our gardens during the blooming season except on Sundays, when we are closed.

OUR 1951 INTRODUCTIONS

CASABIANCA (Tunis x Fortune) 38C90/1. 2b. Distinct in form is this flower with its spreading white perianth, and rather short, but good sized creamy lemon crown widely flared and nicely crimped. Sturdy stems make this an attractive garden flower, and its form gives it value for cutting. $5.00 each.

CHINOOK (John Evelyn x Fortune) 37C41/7. 2b. From the same cross as our previous introductions, Santiam and Linn, this has a large flat milk-white perianth, and a very large saucer-shaped crown which varies from salmon orange to yellow depending on weather, soil, and stage of development of the flower. A striking garden plant. $3.00 each.

CIBOLA (Malvern Gold x Trenoon) I48/1. 2a. One of the very first of the larger flowered Daffodils to open here, this bears considerable resemblance to its seed parent, but is of somewhat better form, richer coloring, better substance, and slightly larger in size. The flat perianth is of rich deep yellow and the rather large crown of rich golden yellow is beautifully crimped. The short necked stiff stemmed flowers are well faced. Only a few to offer this year at $10.00 each.

FAIRY DREAM (Nevis x Beersheba) 36C29/1. 1c. Very smooth and symmetrical clean white flower with unusually flat even overlapping perianth, and rather long, nicely balanced trumpet. Very pretty medium sized bloom. $5.00 each.

PAUL BUNYAN (Aerolite x Kandahar) 38C6/1. 1a. Not a flower that would be recommended for exhibition, although it surely can make immense blooms with huge flaring trumpets. We have a series of gigantic yellow trumpet seedlings which have elicited much comment and been a center of attraction in our planting, and while none are of show calibre, this is one of the best. Perianth quite wide and flat; trumpet very large with nicely crimped flange. A bowl containing a few blooms of this is very effective for church or hall decoration. $4.00 each.

LEMON DROPS. G65/1. 5a. A seedling from Fortune by what was assumed to be Vera West pollen, but undoubtedly the pollen parent of three seedlings from the lot, including this one, was triandrus. Very pretty soft lemon flowers of nice form, usually borne three on a stem. Free bloomer and good increaser. Quite distinct from the usual run of triandrus hybrids. A very few bulbs to offer at $5.00 each.

ZEST (Beersheba x Kandahar) 36C2/2. 1b. A sister seedling to Silverdale, which was introduced several years ago, this seems to improve as we grow it longer. A most vigorous grower and free bloomer, giving large quantities of large blooms on very tall stems. Flat milk white perianth of good form and well overlapping, and quite long nicely proportioned pale yellow trumpet fading to cream. After watching this for ten years, we feel it worthy of a place in other gardens. $2.50 each.

1 bulb each of Casabianca, Chinook, Fairy Dream, Paul Bunyan, and Zest for $16.00.

REVISED SYSTEM FOR THE CLASSIFICATION OF DAFFODILS

In Use Since January 1, 1950

- (i) "Colored" means yellow or some other color than white.

All species and wild, or reputedly wild, forms and hybrids.

Division 11—MISCELLANEOUS NARCISSI

All Narcissi not falling into any of the foregoing Divisions.

CARLTON

*Now blow the Daffodils on slender stalks,
Small keen flames that leap up in the mold
And run along the dripping garden walks.*
—Reese

*And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,
Till they die of their own dear loveliness.*
—Shelley

*It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining Daffodils;
In every dimpled drop I see
Wild flowers on distant hills.*
—Loveman

*Fair Daffodils we weep to see
You haste away so soon.*

SPECIAL CLOSING-OUT OFFER

Since we grow about 1500 or more separate lots of our hybrid seedlings in addition to some 600 named varieties of Daffodils, we find it necessary to cut down on the number of kinds we grow. In order to dispose of many of the cheaper and more common sorts, we make these special offers: 100 mixed double nose bulbs for $7.00, or an equal quantity by measure of mixed sizes for $7.00. 100 blooming size round bulbs and large slabs in good mixture for $4.00. Or if you wish your bulbs labeled as to variety, we will supply 100 double nose bulbs for $3.00 and include at least 5 varieties. These lots to be made up of our selection. These bulbs are worth more than this price, but where we offer so many varieties, there are always some that we have in surplus and there are others of which we do not have enough to meet the demand. With present growing expenses, it is unprofitable to continue these and we desire to give more attention to our seedlings. If you want a lot of Daffodils for cutting or for garden decoration, this is your opportunity.

CULTURAL INSTRUCTIONS

Daffodils are not difficult to grow, but like other flowers they respond to good cultural practices. Nearly any good well drained soil is suitable, and while there are somewhat divergent opinions among growers, it seems rather generally conceded that plenty of moisture during the growing season is more essential than feeding with fertilizers. A soil deficient in plant food will quite obviously not be ideal, and while a good quality bulb grown there may give a good account of itself the first year, its food reserves will be depleted and mediocre results may be anticipated in subsequent seasons.

The ground should be deeply worked before planting, and when well pulverized the bulbs may be planted so that they are covered with three or four inches of soil. If commercial fertilizer is to be used, see that it does not come in direct contact with the bulb, and use a preparation with more phosphorus and potash than nitrogen. Do not expect fertilizers to take the place of humus, and if available use compost in preference, or at least as a supplement, to chemical fertilizers.

The soil should be well drained but with plenty of moisture available preceding the blooming period if the finest blooms are to be produced. Proper cultivation is beneficial but should consist of shallow stirring of the soil and removal of weeds; deep digging near the plant tends to destroy the long feeder roots which may come close to the surface.

Daffodils should be dug and replanted every two or three years for best results. Digging may be done as soon as the foliage is mostly dead, usually in late June or early July, and bulbs may be cleaned and divided about a month later for replanting in September or October. While out of the ground, they should be kept in a cool, dry place.

While Daffodils do not take kindly to forcing, they are good subjects for pot culture provided they are potted early and given cool growing conditions. Fill pots with loam and sand mixed with peat moss or well decomposed leaves. The drainage hole should be covered with small stones, broken crockery, or charcoal to insure perfect drainage. Pots may be buried in soil or peat moss and kept moist. This should be done in September, and after two or three months, the first pots may be taken up and kept inside in a cool dark place for two or three weeks, after which they may be given more light. From then on they may be given a slightly higher temperature, but most varieties resent forcing and if given much warmth, they may fail to bloom or become leggy and lacking in attractiveness. Flowers to develop high quality should be opened slowly and kept cool after opening if it is desired to keep them very long.

It is essential that potted bulbs be watched closely at all times and be kept from drying out, as much of the success of growing good Daffodils hinges on their having plenty of moisture during their growing season. And it is quite as important that the drainage is good. Some varieties do not take kindly to growing in pots but, on the other hand, it is doubtful if some kinds ever reach the perfection grown in the open that they attain when grown in pots and opened indoors in a cool room where they are unaffected by inclement weather. Some of the white Daffodils are particularly entrancing when grown thus.

Nearly all flowers are afflicted by some pests and Daffodils are not an exception. Basal rot may damage bulbs in spots where drainage is poor or where diseased bulbs have been grown previously. In some areas, the Narcissus fly is destructive. The adult fly emerges from the ground and lays eggs around the base of the stem or foliage. These hatch and the larvae burrow into the bulb. Naphthalene flakes sprinkled at the base of the foliage two or three times from blooming season to the time the foliage dies down, or spraying with 5% DDT are suggested remedies. If any bulbs are found infected at digging time, they should be fumigated with cyanogas, or if but a few bulbs are involved, the fly larvae removed and the bulb dusted with sulphur.

FLOWER ARRANGEMENT, CAMPFIRE

CUT FLOWERS

As cut flowers, Daffodils are especially desirable both from the artistic standpoint and for the fact that they come early in the season when they can help banish the drabness left by receding winter days. It should be remembered that they are cool weather flowers and if they are cut and taken into a warm room they will last only a few days while in a cool situation they may hold up two weeks. When the weather is favorable, they not infrequently last three or four weeks on the plant. They lend themselves admirably to various types of arrangements in vases and bowls.

HYBRIDIZING

Most fanciers who are really bitten by the Daffodil "bug" cannot refrain from trying their hands at the fascinating hobby of cross pollenating some of their favorites and growing them from seed. There is perhaps no more intriguing pursuit than that of the hybridist, and the Daffodil breeder takes second place to none in enthusiasm. Growing something new and original is the privilege of every devotee of this game, but since it is very time consuming in the matter of waiting for results, one should have good quality flowers to work on. The technique of crossing flowers is very simple, being merely a matter of picking one of the six pollen bearing anthers in the center of the crown or trumpet with a small forceps, and rubbing the pollen off on the stigma (in the center and surrounded by the six anthers) of another flower. The flower from which the pollen is taken should be one just freshly opened or one which has been cut so as to avoid contamination by insects. If the flower to which the pollen is applied has had its anthers removed on first opening and it has been opened only a day or two, it is not necessary to cover the blossom as there is little danger of foreign pollen having reached it. Each flower crossed should be tagged showing the varieties involved in the cross. Seed will ripen about six or eight weeks later and these may be sown about one inch deep in early fall. They reach flowering size at from four to six years of age. While the first crosses try one's patience, if one makes new crosses each year, there will be new seedlings to watch each season after the first ones bloom. From then on, it is a matter of watching each seedling as it blooms and marking for further observation and propagation those that show promise. While thousands of Daffodils have been introduced, there is still much room for improvement in many lines. At present, many, if not most, breeders are working to get better pinks, but this is only one of many interesting lines to follow.

ANEMONE FULGENS

Neither color illustrations nor descriptive adjectives can adequately portray the beauty of these Scarlet Windflowers, although their name, fulgens, indicates something of their fiery red coloring. Aside from their intrinsic value for brilliance and form, they are unusual in supplying such high coloring so early in the season, occasionally blooming here in the Northwest in January, but ordinarily starting to open in February and continuing until near May 1st. The color is comparable to that of the species Tulip, fosteriana, but with perhaps a bit less orange in its composition. The daisy-like flowers are 2 to 2½ inches in diameter and are borne on stems about six inches long at the start of the season with increasing height to 12 to 15 inches at the close. Splendid for cut flowers. The blooms close at night and on cloudy days but open with sunshine or when taken into a warm room. In our opinion, the finest of all anemones with which we are acquainted.

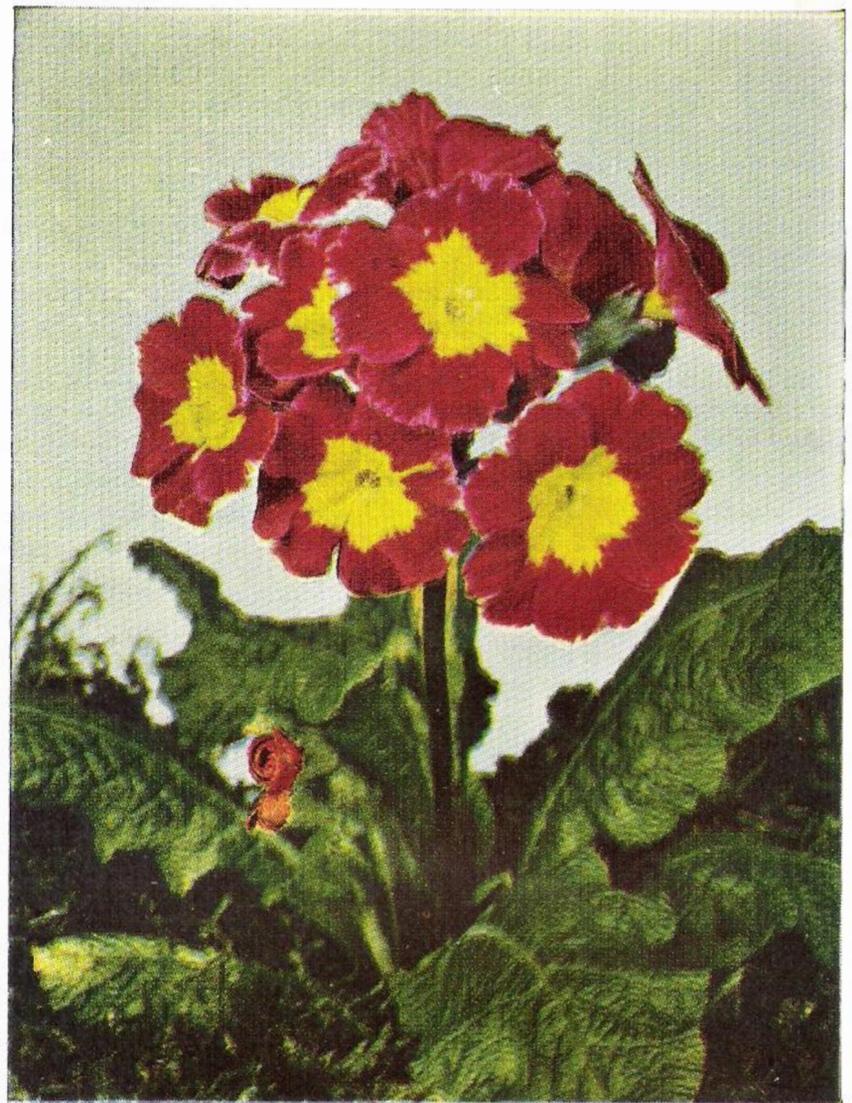

This plant grows from a rootstock which appears to be little more than a gnarled and twisted piece of dead bark. Should preferably be planted in the fall and given loose friable soil with good drainage but plenty of moisture during the growing season. Possibly not hardy in very cold sections but has withstood zero temperatures here. Where lower temperatures prevail some protection would be advisable, such as a cover of fir boughs or a cold frame. Spring planting would likely give very few blooms the first year; in fact, fall planting will not assure a maximum display until the second year. A very worth while companion to your Daffodil planting. Small divisions, 25c each, $2.50 per dozen. Larger clumps, 60 each; $6.00 per dozen.

DELPHINIUMS

From a planting of several strains, including the Pacific and Lyondels, we have seed of a few of the best plants which are hand crossed. These include semidoubles in blues, lavenders, mauves, violets, purples, and whites. Seed $1.50 per packet.

DAFFODIL SEED

Another innovation. Heretofore we have not offered Daffodil seed as we planted all the hand pollenized seed we produced. Inasmuch as Daffodils, unlike Gladioli and Irises, can produce only a very few seed per bloom in most instances, we cannot offer specific crosses; moreover, many varieties do not bloom together or they are incompatible so that the amount of seed which could be produced from the more rare varieties would be very limited, and if offered at all, the price would necessarily be prohibitive. However, a few good varieties, such as Rubra, Jean Hood, some of the yellow trumpets, and a few others produce seed in fair amounts, and we offer a very limited amount of seed, primarily from such crosses at 25 seed for $1.00 in mixture, or 15 seed for $1.00 labeled as to cross.

PRIMULA POLYANTHUS

Again this season we offer, subject to crop, a limited amount of seed of a very good strain of primroses; in fact, a combination of the strains of several leading Primrose breeders. Hand pollenized seed from a wide range of colors, including reds, bronzes, yellows, whites, pinks, blues and numerous intermediate shades, tints, and variations, in mixture only at $1.50 per packet.

IRIS

We grow a goodly number of the better Bearded Iris, including varieties such as Helen McGregor, Chivalry, New Snow, Spanish Peaks, Cherie, Pink Cameo, Goldbeater, Firedance, Pierre Menard, Confetti, Argus Pheasant, and many others, including our own seedlings. We make many crosses each year and this year start an innovation of offering seed at 25 for $1.00. We cannot offer any specific crosses this year but will label seed as to cross. Not less than 25 seed of one cross at this price. Or 40 seed from mixed crosses for $1.00. An economical way of getting some good Iris.
